

If you only knew how your gaze stays,
long after you've gone away.
Your eyes, round and brown,
sparkle with a luster captured in opulent crowns.
Now I quietly lay, fixated on maintaining this haze.
It's the only way I'm able to see your gaze.

If you only knew how your kiss left its imprint—sparked an inferno like flint.
Your lips, smooth and slick
gave my heart reason to tick.
In your presence I am able to taste love's very essence.

If you only knew how your touch
made my heart rush.
Run your hands all over
and calm this lonely rover.
My elusive illusion,
I wish to alter our conclusion.

If you only knew how I dream of you,
haunted by words you can't undo.
Uttered by your lips,
darkening dreams like an eclipse.
I'll never forget the date,
You removed me from your fate.
